Are you looking to make the most of the technology you already have?

Through the experience of remote education in recent months, every school and college saw how important technology became in enabling education to continue, with many institutions benefiting from the support offered by the Department for Education's EdTech Demonstrator Programme in 2020-21.

Benefit from the support offered, just as 4,000 schools did in 2020-21.

This Programme has now been extended for a further year to continue to provide access to free, peer-led practical support for the effective use of technology in teaching and learning and to embed the gains made in lockdown into long term strategic change.

The Programme supports any publicly-funded school or college in England with free access to expert staff and leaders from around the country.

Build relationships, learn and share experiences with a local EdTech Demonstrator school or college by registering your interest here for immediate support or for help into 2022.
